1. A former convent about 200 meters southwest of the Visoko (Y 25/R 39) railroad station, on the eastern bank of the Bosna River, opposite the confluence of the Fojnicka and the Bosna Rivers, was enlarged and converted into a barracks installation. The construction work started in 1945 and ended 30 June 1949. The installation consisted of a guardhouse; a three-story brick building, about 80 x 25 x 12 meters; a large garage with repair shop, about 60 x 15 meters; two large new armories, each about 80 x 25 meters; and some annex buildings. Two headquarters buildings belonging to the barracks were on the western bank of the Bosna River, about 400 meters northwest of the concrete bridge across that river.

2. [REDACTED] the barracks installation was occupied by a motorized heavy artillery unit of 400 to 500 troops. The commanding officer was a major. The unit had 12 guns, allegedly 150 mm caliber, with pneumatic tires and split-trail carriages. The guns were towed by tracked vehicles, including six Duesenberg half-tracks of German make. About 15 American trucks were also seen. *
